HER FLEXIBLE CONSCIENCE. Barbara Aub Repudiates the Confession She Made. New York, Dec. 12.—Barbara Aub, who ed to Recorder Goff on Thanksgiving night that she had falsely sworn when she testified at the trial of Walter L. S. Langerman, whom she accused of criminally as saulting her, is said to have repudiated that Assistant District Attorney Robert Town assistant instrict Altoriey Robert fown send, who prosecuted Langerman, announced Barbara's retraction. He said that Mrs. Mitchell, one of Barbara's aunts, had informed him that during an interview with Barbara in the Tombs the latter had told her aunt that her confession was false, and that her testimony given at Langerman's trial was true.

Barbara said she had been pressed to make Barbara said she had been pressed to make the confession by people at the Poor of Hope, where she was stopping after the trial. She said she had been forced into making the confession by Miss Kellard, one of the women in charge there.

Frederick B. House, counsel for Earbara Auh, was called to the Tombs prison late yesterday by Mrs. Mitchell, and had an interview with the prisoner, but when seen later would not admit that there had been a confession made to any one. He said:

You can take my word for it, there has been a refraction made."

When District Attorney Fellows was seen regarding the retraction he said there was no probability of putting Langerman again on trial. He said he would want stronger evidence against Langerman than wa

A Hobo's Opinion of Policemen, Tersely Told by One of Them.

The tattered vagrants seen so often, with extended palm and plending eyes, on the principal business streets at this season of the year, are almost always provided with the year, are almost always provided with a goodly stock of impudence, to which a glowing spark of wit is sometimes added. Their natural enemy is the blue-coated policeman, and their cup of remporary hap-piness is filled to overflowing when they can, by word or deed, go the guardian of the peace one better. WHAT IS APPENDICITIS?

A Disease Which in Causing Much Apprehension. Philadelphia Ledger.

A paper was read last week before the College of Physicians and Surgeons by John B. Deaver, M. D., on the subject of appendicitis, to which he had devoted much study, and upon which he had before read several papers.

As this disease, to the general public at least, seems to be one of recent origin, or of recent recognition by physicians, it will be of interest to the readers of the Ledger to know something of its nature.

to know something of its nature.

It is now over twenty years since the Ledger published a notice of a death by supposed violence, which was investigated by the coroner and found to be caused by what is now known as appendicitis. At that time the coroner's physician stated that such cases were rarely met with, but within the last three or four years there within the last three or four years there have been so many in this city that the disease bids fair to rival "nervous prostration" in the number of its victims.

It is now more than sixty years since the disease was first described by Albers, of Bonn, under the name of typbillus. It has not been generally understood, however, until within the last twenty years, and even now there is a great diversity of opinion as to what constitutes a correct opinion as to what constitutes a correct diagnosis of the disease. There is also considerable difference of opinion as to whether the disease should be treated medically or surgically, or when the surgeon should perorm an operation.

The vermiform appendix (or appendage, is it was formerly called.) is a parrow to attached to the inner and posterior wall of the caccum. It has no particular office, and is to be found only in man and some of and is to be found only in man and some of the higher species of apes. Its length varies from one to nine inches, with an average of four inches, and is about the size of a goese quill. It is hollow and has an opening into the caccum, which is guarded by a valve. The disease is an in-flammation of this appendix, which pro-duces abscesses, the pus from which sets up an inflammation in the surrounding tissues.

The great majority of the acute cases are caused by foreign bodies getting into the appendix, and, having no way to get out. appendix, and, having no way to get out, ferment and set up an inflammation. These are often the seeds of small fruits or pins and buttons swallowed by children. It is often caused by catarrhal inflammation or an inflammation of the mucous membrane, and to this cause is attributed the very large number of cases noted within the last three or four years since the advent of the grippe. All cases begin as a catarrhal inflammation. Sudden colds and wet feet have brought on attacks of the disease.

Within the last year or more decided progress has been made in the diagnosis and treatment of the disease. There are three 'priocipal symptoms which are said to be infallible—first, the sudien onset of acute abdominal pain in one previously well; second, the rigidity of the right side of the lower abdominal walls, and third, lendermess over the site of the appendix. The disease is often confounded with typhoid fever, and precious time is lost before the error is discovered. Many fatal cases of appendicits baye to doubt been recorded as peritonitis, inflammation and bstruction of the bowels. Whether or not the surgeon's knife or the physician's potion is the proper method of treatment depends upon from which stand-point the argument is made. Cures are ef-fected both ways, and the physician often resorts to surgery when he believes the case demands it. The surgeon believes that it is administr. The surgeon believes that it is always best to remove the appendix, and in the paper read by Dr. Denver—it is stated that in the statistics of 200 cases where the operation was performed between the at-tacks there were but two deaths, and they occurred in the first bundred. As to the proper time for operating, he believes, with Macbeth, that "II 'twee done when 'ts done, then' twere well it were done quickly," and an operation should be performed as soon as the disease is diagnosed. Also, if an acute or chronice ase is apparently cured, the appendix should be removed before the ocurrence of another attack.

The physician demurs to this operation upon a well man who may never have an-other attack. It is believed, too, by many physicians that a large majority of patients with appendicitis will, if properly treated, get well without an operation.

A record of cases shows that the disease is most common between the ages of ten and

"Pat" Lowered His Voice Father O'Halloran bad a telephone put

Father O'Halloran had a telephone put into the parsonage in connection with the church and the parochial school. Patrick McFee, his reverence's handy man, was instructed in the use of the instrument, and it was only the next day when Pat, dusting out the church, held the ringing of the telephone bell. Taking down the receiver, Patrick was pleased to hear Father O'Halloran's familiar voice, asking him something or other about his work. In essaying to answer, he remembered that his reverence was a long ways off, and therefore ence was a long ways off, and therefore he shouted into the transmitter at the top

"I don't understand you. Patrick," said the telephone.
Patrick tried again with no better success. On his third trial he came near splitting the telephone, but highin came Father O'Halloran's voice: "I cin't hear what you're saying, Patrick."
Pat had by this time lost something of his patience, and as he stood gathering his breath for a fourth blast, he couldn't refrain from solloquizine in a low tone:

frain from sollinguizing in a low tone:
"Ah, may the divil fly away wid the ould fool!" But Pat dropped the telephone like a hot potato and fell to his knees in dismay, when he heard Pather O'Halloran's voice again:
"Now, I hear you perfectly, Patrick,"—
